Does His Duty Without Fear.

Francis I. Henry, the special United States district attorney who brought Senator Mitchell and others to indict ment in Oregon, fears nothing and has a record for absolute integrity. In his early days he practiced law in Ari zona. A woman came to him for help in securing a divorce on account of her husband's cruelty, but assured him that her husband threatened to kill any lawyer who would take up his wife's case. "Oh, that is a matter that will come up later," said Henry calm ly. He got the woman her divorce and next day met the former husband ir the street. The latter took a revolver out of his pocket, whereupon Henry being quicker "on the draw," shot the man dead.

For Systematic Scientific Research

Prof. Pearson, the English scientist has been considering the suggestion Pearson says that what science needs at present is to get rid of most of its data and investigators with brains enough to interpret what is left. "At least 50 per cent of the observations made and the data collected," says Prof. Pearson, "is worthless, and no man, however able, could deduce any result from them at all. In engineer's language, we need to 'scrap-heap about 50 per cent of the products of nineteenth century science."

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON EY THE REV. JOHN C. AGAR.

Subject: The First Temptation. Brooklyn, N. Y .- Sunday morning, in the Church of the New Jerusalem (Swedenborgian), the pastor, the Rev. John C. Ager, preached on "The First Temptation," The text was from Matthew iv:1-4: "Then was Jesus led up into the desert by he spirit, to be tempted by the evil. And having fasted forty days and forty nights, he after that was hungry. And the tempter came to Him and said, If thou art the Son of God speak, in order that these stones may become loaves. But He answering said, It has been written. Not by bread alone shall a man live, but by every word that goeth forth from the mouth of God." Mr. Ager said:

The gospel of Matthew describes specifically three comptations of the Lord in the wilder as immedially after His baptism. The form of the narrative suggests at once that these stories are not history, but are parables, which picture the three general ways in which fallen humanity is approached and entired : infernal influences. And when so understood they become in the fullest sense a revelation of divine truth to men. And so understood they suggest at once that there is some sort of threefoldness in our spiritual experiences. And when we examine our spiritual experiences carefully we are able to distinguish in our inner life three distinct planes of thought and feeling.

The first or lower of these three clanes of life we are all familiar with. It includes all thoughts and feelings, all motives and impulses and appetites that have reference exclusively to our life in this world. This we call the natural man. Distinctly above this lies what we call ordinarily the religious life. Its thoughts and feelings and motives have primary reference to those interests that outlive our life in this world. Its largest and dominant factors are faith, conviction and duty. Faith and conviction are beliefs, though beliefs have been touched and quickened by religious emotion. Duty is the conduct that belief or faith or conviction imposes; that is, the dominion of truth over the lower impulses and appetites. Consequently this realm of the life is predominantly intellectual. Its dominant impulse is love of truth and loyalty to truth. It lies distinctly above the natural man and is called the spiritual man. These two realms of thought, feeling and action we can easily distinguish. They make up the twofold life of every man who is honestly trying to live a true life in the world. But they evidently do not include the highest spiritual possibilities of human life. There is another realm of life clearly set before us in the divine word, although few Christians know practically much about it. It is, in fact, the essence of all religious life. It is the life that is defined and enjoined in the two great commandments, to love the Lord our God with all our heart and soul and mind and strength, and to love our neighbor as ourselves. This means that the essence of the heavenly life is love and whenever that gains possession of us, faith, conviction and duty will all be swallowed up in love. We shall see with the eyes of love and act always from the impulse of love. Love of Prof. Simon Newcomb looking to going upward to God and outward to the systematization of scientific re mail will be the sole motive power of search by organizing investigators into the life. This is the highest state of what might be termed battalions. Dr. | man, the highest attainment of human termed distinctively the heavenly or

> There are, then, three distinct regions of life in us. The complete man is a three-storied being. Consequently there must be a corresponding three-foldness in all our spiritual experiences. And it is this distinction that is pictured in these three typical temptations of our Lord. The first is a type of the temptations that belong to the lower or natural degree of the mind, the second to spiritual and the third to the celestial or heavenly.

The first temptation is pictured as an appeal to a physical appetite. After the forty days and nights of fasting Jesus was hungry and there was nothing to satisfy His hunger, and it is suggested by the tempter that He convert into loaves of bread some of the stones that covered the ground. This physical picture has very evidently a spiritual meaning, which deals, not with the mere body and its cravings, but with the essential man and his cravings and requirements. It deals with the most universal fact of human nature, hich is hunger. From the merely material activities of his physical body up to the highest activity of his spiritual nature man is, in a sense, a mere bundle of hungers. And this is true because he is merely a recipient; and every minutest vesicle of both body and soul is a mouth clamoring to be fed. But it is only a small part of this universal hunger that we are conscious of. As in the body some of the more general organs make us conscious of their needs when they are not supplied, while the needs of the numberless smaller organs and vesicles are met by physical processes that we are wholly unconscious of, so of the universal hunger of the spirit only a small part eyer falls within our consciousness. And this is so because the Lord requires of us only so much as He must require of us to make us images and likenesses of Pimself. To be that it is necessary that we should contribute to our life a certain measure of activity and effort and co-operation and reciprocation. And to secure that. some of the more external hungers of the body and of the mind appeal to us strongly enough to prompt us to such action as is necessary to satisfy

But in our present condition all the hungers of our natural life are more or less perverted hungers, which seek for perverted and unhealthy satisfactions. And this we begin to recognize as soon as we begin to see what the true life of man is. The first evils the truth reveals to us are the indulgences of wrong appetites, and passions, and cravings, and the first task the truth imposes on us is to refuse to these wrong hungers or cravings the satisfaction they demand.

This repudiation of these cravings we should find a hard task to begin with if we were not helped in it by a counteracting hunger. Among the sweetest of the satisfactions in life is the approval of those whose approval we prize. And our strong hunger for this approval makes it easy for us to discard reprehensible indulgences and pleasures.

This is, of course, a purely selfish aim, and yet any aim or effort, even so dublous a one as this, to see what is evil in our life and to put it away. oneus the mind to more and higher truth, which brings all things into clearer light, and this higher truth makes clear to us that disreputable evils are not the only evils we have to deal with, that there are many practices that are approved of and freely indulged in by the world about us that are sins we no longer tolerate, so our clarified conscience now demands that our life shall be purged of these conventional and reputable evils. And in this task we are not helped by the approval of public opinion. But there is another selfish satisfaction that does help us. It is the sweet satisfaction of feeling that we are good and are deserving of all the happiness the Lord has in store for all who are good. This feeling takes many forms in the mind, but in general it is the feeling that we are as virtuous as most of those we know and far more virtuous and kindand self-denying than very many whom we know. This is the sweetest satisfaction our merely natural life is capable of, and in many wonderful ways it holds us up to the work of repressing external evils and discarding all lower satisfactions.

So, when the hunger for a better life has been thus far quickened in us, this is the way in which we are always tempted to satisfy it. It is described here as a temptation to make the stones of the desert into bread. The stones of the desert are the aspect that spiritual truth takes on when it is apprehended by the natural mind or the self-life. This is the aspect that spiritual truth takes on in the letter of the word, which is truth adapted to the lowest spiritual needs of men. There reward and punishment are presented as the motives for refraining from evil and doing right. It is an appeal to what is called enlightened selfishness.

This aspect of the truth is necessary to start us on the way toward the heavenly life. But to convert these stones into bread is to be permanently satisfied with these purely selfish aspects of truth and with this selfish stage of right living, this doing right and refraining from wrong doing for the sake of the approval of others, and for the sake of the self-satisfaction it affords. To stop at this point, to be content with this attainment, which is temptation that confronts us all again and again, is to appropriate to ourselves the letter that killeth and to shut our eyes to the spirit that maketh alive. For it is making the letter of the food into bread in this way that makes it destructive of spiritual life. The Lord's answer to the tempter teaches us how we must meet this temptation. This answer is quoted from His words of warning to the children of Israel when they had just passed through their forty years of trial in the wilderness. To them He "Thou shalt remember all the ways which the Lord thy God hath led thee these forty years in the desert. And He suffered thee to hunger and fed thee with manna, which thou knewest not: neither did thy fathers know that He might make thee know that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth man live." These words, now quoted in part by the Lord as His reply to the tempter, contain the truth by which this temptation must always be met. The temptation is to permit ourselves to rest in the sense of our own goodness and to go on multiplying our good works of all kinds and refraining from all outward evils, that we may multiply our spiritual riches and increase and deepen our self satisfaction. This is the besetting temptation in the religious life of our time. As the old falsity of faith alone has faded out of religious belief, this more subtle and attractive falsity has taken its place. Goodness is everywhere being made the test and measure of religious character with very little regard for the quality of the goodness,

To this temptation the divine answer is: "Not by bread alone shall man live." Man can no more live by charity or good works alone, which are symbol ized by bread than he can live by faith alone. What man must live by is every word that goeth forth from the mouth of God. We live by getting our life into its true relation to the divine life. And that cannot be done by recognizing this or that particular aspect of truth and trying to live by that. It can be done only by an earnest and persistent effort to shape all our thinking and all our willing and all our doing by every word that goeth forth from the mouth of God.

The Discouraged Man.

Discouragement cuts the nerve of present effort and darkens the sky of hope for better things. The evangelist who coined the phrase, "God cannot use a discouraged man," was a wise preacher: he might also have said that the world has no use for a discouraged man, Booker T. Washington, in his "Up From Slavery." gives the keynote of his own success in the following sensible words: "I do not recall that I ever became discouraged over anything that I set out to accomplish. I have begun everything with the idea that I could succeed, and I never had much patience with the multitudes of people who are always ready to explain why one cannot succeed." Such a spirit will carry one through every difficulty. and over every obstacle. Speaking of a young man who was to come, an old prophet said: "He shall not fail or be discouraged." The reason he did not fail was because he refused to be discouraged. The old doggerel, "O, do not be discouraged," had a big message even though it was wretched poetry and worse music. The sky is ever dark to him who keeps his eyes on the ground!-Service.

Well, I went out, and, as you know, I played second base for a week without making an error. My, but I felt tunny. A True Snake Story.

"The affair happened on Saturda; night," says the Bulawago Chroniele in a room on the outskirts of Rayl ton. Four card players were intent on a game of whist and the window was open to allow of some fresh air Suddenly, out of the darkness, five feet of black mamba hurled itself through the open window into the room. For a moment every one was paralyzed, and then one of the occupants seized hold of the most handy weapon and flung it at the intruder. It happened to be a water bag and the snake received a cold douche, which was evidently not to its liking for it vanished just as suddenly as it had come, by the same route. A search of the premises discovered the creature in an adjoining room, but it again made its escape, and, as the police would say, is 'still at large.'

BOOK OF BOOKS. Over 30,000,000 Publish J.

An Oakland lady who has a taste for good literature, tells what a happy time she had on "The Road to Wellville." She says:

."I drank coffee freely for eight years before I began to perceive any evil effects from it. Then I noticed that I was becoming very nervous, and that my stomach was gradually losing the power to properly assimilate my food. In time I got so weak that I dreaded to leave the house-for no reason whatever but because of the miserable condition of my nerves and stomach. I attributed the trouble to anything in the world but coffee, of course. I dosed myself with medicines, which in the end would leave me in a worse condition than at first. I was most wretched and discouraged-not 30 years old and feeling that life was a failure!

"I had given up all hore of ever enjoying myself like other people, till one day I read the little book, "The Road to Wellville." It opened my eyes, and taught me a lescon I shall never forget and cannot value too highly. I immediately quit the use of the old kind of coffee and began to drink Postum Food Coffee. I noticed the beginning of an improvement in the whole tone of my system, after only two days use of the new drink, and in a very short time realized that I could go about like other people without the least return of the nervous dread that formerly gave me so much trouble. In fact, my nervousness disappeared entirely and has never returned, although it is now a year that I have been drinking Postum

Food Coffee. And my stomach is now like iron-nothing can upset it! "Last week, during the big Conclave in San Francisco, I was on the go day and night without the slightest fatigue: and as I stood in the immense crowd watching the great parade that lasted for hours. I thought to myself. This strength is what Postum Food Coffee has given me." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason. The little book," The Road to Wellville," may be found in every pkg,

Just Discrimination in Railway Rates. All railroad men qualified to speak on the subject in a responsible way are likely to agree with President Samuel Spencer, of the Southern Railway, when he says: "There is no division of opinion as to the desirability of step ping all secret or unjustly discriminatory devices and practices of whatseever character." Mr. Spencer, in speaking of "unjustly discriminatory" rates and devices. makes a distinction which is at once apparent to common sense. There may be discrimination in freight rates which is just, reasonable and imperatively required by the complex commercial and geographical conditions with which expert rate makers have to deal. To abolish such open and honest discrimination might paralyze the industries of cities. States and whole sections of our national territory.

This distinction between just and unjust discrimination is clearly recognized in the conclusions of the International Railway Congress, published vesterday:

"Tariffs should be based on commercial principles, taking into account the special conditions which bear upon the commercial value of the services rendered. With the reservation that rates shall be charged without arbitrary discrimination to all shippers alike under like conditions, the making of rates should as far as possible have all the elasticity necessary to permit the develop-ment of the traffic and to produce the greatest results to the public and to the railroads themselves.'

The present proposal is, as Mr. Walker D. Hines, of Louisville, showed in his remarkable testimony the other day before the Senate Committee at Washington, to crystalize flexible and justly discriminatory rates into fixed Government rates which cannot be changed except by the intervention of some Government tribunal, and by this very process to increase "the temptation to depart from the published rate and the lawful rate in order to meet some overpowering and urgent commercial condition."-New York Sun.

Are the Packers Receiving Fair Play? When the Garfield report on the business methods of the packers appeared, after eight months' investigation, it was severely criticised and roundly denounced. After three months of publicity it is significant that those who attempted to discredit it have failed to controvert the figures contained in that exhaustive document. The prblic is beginning to notice this omission, and the feeling is rapidly growing that the sensational charge out of which the "Beef Investigation" arose were without foundation. If the official statements of the report are susceptible of contradiction, a good many people are now asking why the facts and figures are not furnished to contradict them.

The truth seems to be that most of the charges contain unfounded sensational assertions. A flagrant example of this appeared in a recent article in an Eastern magazine, to the effect that forty Iowa banks were forced to close their doors in 1903-4 by the Beet Trust's manipulation of cattle prices." Chief Clerk Cox, of the banking department of the Iowa State Auditor's office, has tabulated the list of banks given in the magazine article and has publicly denounced the statement as utterly untrue. He gives separately the reasons for each failure mentioned and officially states that they have been caused by unwise speculations and by reckless banking methods. It may be well to suspend judgment upon the packers until the charges against them

Sold by all Druggists, 25 and 50c. bottle. The magazine short story is too of ten pointless. This is not the case with a tale called "Hickory Dock," by Eleanor A. Hallowell, appearing in the June Lippincott. It is a love-story not unconnected with a clock, as the title indicates, and it passes the reader through some very charming emotions to a happy climax.

EVERY WALK IN LIFE.

A. A. Boyce, a farmer living three and a half miles from Trenton, Mo., says: "A severe cold settled in my kidneys and developed so quickly that i was obliged to lay tiged to lay off work on account of the aching in my back and sides. For a time I was unable to walk at all, and every makeshift I tried and all the medicine I took had not the slightest effect. My back continued to grow weaker until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pilis, and I must say I was more than surprised and gratified to notice the backache disappearing gradually until it finally stopped."
